Work attachments pay off for SUSS grads

Mr Abdul Fareed Mustakin (far left) impressed his boss, Mr Daniel Thong (left), so much during his six-month internship two years ago that he was asked to continue in a permanent position while he studied. Later, when Mr Thong started a new firm, Nimbus for Work, he offered Mr Abdul Fareed a full-time job as the marketing and branding lead. ST PHOTO: SYAMIL SAPARI

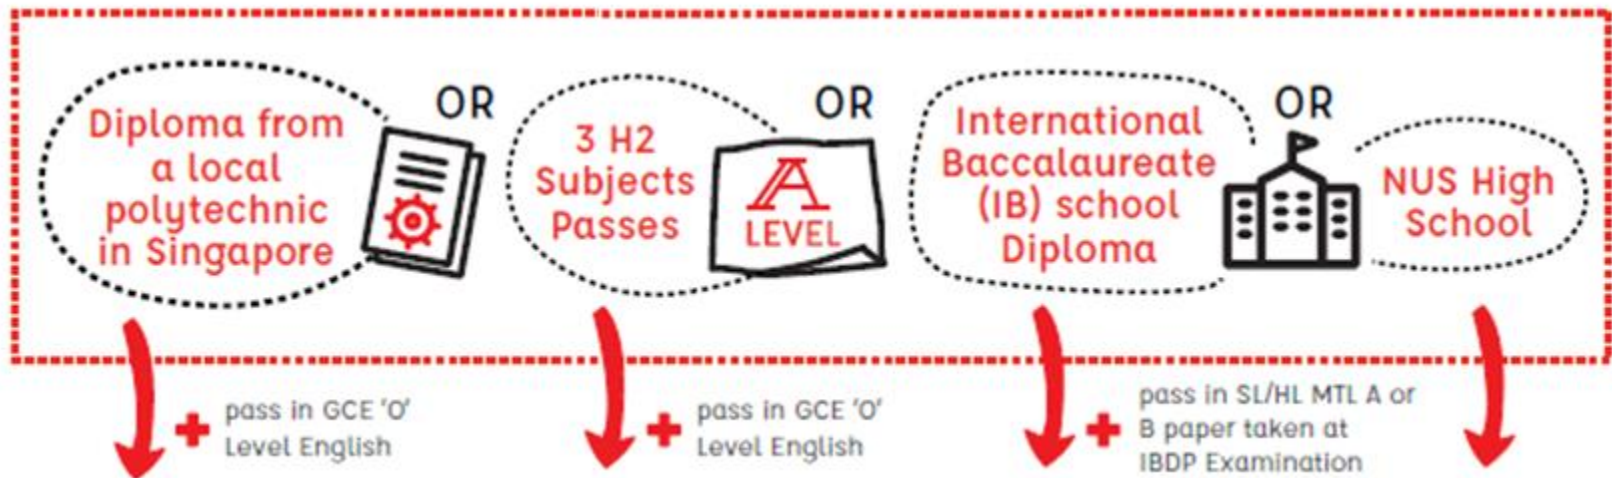

- ✓ Longer, more structured work attachments = good job offers and higher salaries
- ✓ 86% landed jobs within three months of completing their degree studies
- ✓ 50% of SUSS Accountancy graduates have gone to work with companies that they interned with after receiving priority offers.
- ✓ Their starting salaries were $3,800 – $200 more than the starting salaries of other fresh accountancy graduates.
